Common Money Mistakes

People that struggle with money management during their first years of college (such as myself) tend to let the money get to their head. They end up making mistakes such as:

- Spending every penny instead of saving up
- Letting their bills slide (if you're already dealing with that)
- Not researching to find better deals
- Not keeping track of Account Transactions/Balances

Normal issues people tend to run into their first years actually having cash. Why is it important though? I'm glad you asked.

Why Is It Important?

Good In General
Managing your money helps you avoid overspending and live within your means.

Life Lessons
As well as teaching different life lessons and instilling good values and habits, money management also helps teach different life lessons.
